

100 Word Summary: explaining the CV you've created via LinkedIn tells employers about you and post it in your WordPress blog?

My LinkedIn profile tells my employers that I'm "currently a 3rd Year Biomedical Engineering Student" at U.C.D and that I intend on entering the "Mech with Business" ME program next year. I document my previous work experience as an intern at Priority Construction Limited and I note the various working roles I took during my time there. I gave a review on my thoughts and experiences there too. I added my secondary school education with a brief synopsis of the extra-curricular activities I pursued whilst there. Finally, I listed my volunteer experience with "Nyumbani USA/Children of God relief Fund, Inc" and my involvement as a coach of the "Bective Rangers RFC U18s" team during the 2017-2018 season. I concluded my LinkedIn account by adding in my "skills & endorsements" and my previous accomplishments. I believe my CV portrays myself as a driven, well-balanced human that is well-equipped to face any task/challenge put in front of me. LinkedIn provides a platform for presenting yourself professionally and for connecting with employers and colleagues. I changed my privacy settings to only allow my account to be seen by people that are within three degrees away from me, that only I can see my connections and that my last name is not shown unless we're connected.
